Introduction

This chapter of the Plan will focus on defining Hartford’s historic character, followed by an examination of opportunities to preserve and enhance desired community character elements.

Hartford’s Styles

The rich historic nature of Hartford’s architectural styles are characterized in every neighborhood in the City. From the Greek Revival homes built in the South Green neighborhood to the Georgian Revival homes built in the West End, Hartford’s historic resources are a treasure.

Historic Preservation is the vehicle that protects historic character in Hartford’s neighborhoods. Historic Preservation enhances the attractiveness of the City and also stabilizes and increases property values.

The City of Hartford recognized the importance of historic preservation as a means to protect the historic character of each neighborhood and created guidelines to promote responsible preservation practices, to create a mechanism to identify, preserve and enhance historic buildings, to provide a resource of information and expertise for educational purposes and to foster appropriate use and wider public knowledge and appreciation of areas, sites, structures and features.

Progress has been made in preserving Hartford historic character with the enactment of the Historic Preservation Ordinance, and with implementation of the historic preservation guidelines.

Hartford’s Historic Character

Each neighborhood in Hartford has unique character that will be discussed in further detail in this section.

Asylum Hill

Asylum Hill was farmland through the mid-19th century. In 1821, the American School of the Deaf was built where the Hartford Fire Insurance Company now stands. In the 1840’s Asylum Hill became a residential district. The Harriett Beecher Stowe House was built on Forest Street in 1871 and is a Gothic Revival design. Saint Francis Hospital was established in 1897. The Sigourney Square section of Asylum Hill is characterized as having Victorian and Queen Anne style homes built around the turn of the century. In the 1920’s the Aetna Life Insurance Company and the Hartford Fire Insurance Companies moved to Asylum Hill. Since then, many two, and three family residential structures have been built, with a mixture of commercial uses.

Blue Hills

The Blue Hills neighborhood is mainly comprised

Neo-Classical Revival– Kenyon Street

Perfect 6—Park Terrace

Tudor Revival– Prospect Avenue

One City, One Plan– POCD 2020

Bungalow (Arts and Crafts) – Fairfield Avenue

Colonial Revival– Kenyon Street

Georgian Revival– Westerly Terrace

of single family, two-family and three-family homes, with a commercial center located on Blue Hills Avenue. The neighborhood has suburban characteristics in that the properties tend to be larger in size than in other areas of the city. Georgian Revivals, Tutor, Dutch Colonial and Colonial style of housing are found in the Blue Hills neighborhood.

Barry Square

The neighborhood known as Barry Square grew from the establishment of Trinity College and the Institute of Living. Tree lined streets with two-family homes, and triple-decker homes are found in the neighborhood. Single family streets with Dutch Colonial style homes are also found in Barry Square. Queen Anne, Colonial Revival, Gothic Revival cottages styles are found in the neighborhood.

Clay-Arsenal

Clay-Arsenal is one of the oldest neighborhoods in Hartford and is adjacent to the central city. The State Arsenal was once located on the corner of Main and Pavilion Streets. The neighborhood is bounded to the north by the Old North Cemetery and the Spring Grove Cemetery. The neighborhood is partially industrial, near the commercial railroad line, and primarily residential as it extends west from the downtown. Greek Revival, Gothic Revival and multi-family homes built of brick and wood are prevalent in the area. The commercial corridor running from the downtown up Albany Avenue is made of mixed use brick construction.

Frog Hollow

Farmland and several large estates were prominent in the area known today as Frog Hollow until around 1850. Industrial uses emerged, creating some of the large industrial buildings that exist today including the factory buildings lined along Capitol Avenue during that period. Homes built from brick were created for the workers during the industrial era in the southern parts of the neighborhood. Many Italianate, Greek Revival, Queen Anne, and Colonial Revival style homes still exist today. Mixed use buildings also made of brick characterize the neighborhood's business districts, adding a sense of nostalgia and historic presence to the area.

Northeast

The Northeast neighborhood is a diverse neighborhood containing a mixture of parkland, commercial corridors and residential streets. Keney Park, a 633 acre park was designed by Frederick Law Olmsted's architectural firm, borders the neighborhood on the north and west side. Keney Park was a destination for urban dwellers to explore during the turn of the 20th century. The residential areas in the Northeast neighborhood contains a mixture of new construction with the development of Stowe Village and recent infill development. Single-family, two-family and three-family structures are found throughout the neighborhood. Colonial Revivals, Second Empire, and Queen Anne style homes are found on most streets.

Parkville

Parkville was an industrial area extending from the Frog Hollow industrial area. The neighborhood has been going through a transformation in to a mixed use residential neighborhood. The Hartford Rubber Works Plant, once a located at 1429 Park Street is now a bustling mixed used building with shops, residential units, and restaurants.

Most of Parkville homes are constructed of wood frame structures with Gothic Revival, Colonial Queen and Colonial styles.

Sheldon-Charter Oak and South Green

The Sheldon– Charter Oak and South Green area of the city has many significant historic icons. Dutch Point, where the Dutch came to settle in the early 1600’s, now owned by the Hartford Housing Authority, has been redeveloped with brightly colored multifamily housing reminiscent of seaside housing. The Charter Oak Tree, where legend has it the charter from King Charles II was hidden in a large oak tree on the corner of Charter Oak Terrace and Charter Oak Avenue is also in this area of the city.

Several iconic structures come to mind when thinking of the Sheldon-Charter Oak and South Green neighborhood including the Colt Armory with its magnificent dome, an the Barnard Brown House at the South Green. Much of the character of this neighborhood arises from the Colt Factory and worker housing. Many of the buildings are made of brick material in the Gothic Revival, and Queen Anne style of architecture.

South End

The South End neighborhood has a mixture of neighborhood business, single-family, two-family, three-family, and higher density apartment complexes. Many of the streets were developed during the turn of the century. Bungalow, Colonial Revival, Queen Anne styles of homes are found in this area.

Southwest

The Southwest neighborhood is characterized as suburban in nature. Large lot sizes, single family housing and a planned street network make up much of the neighborhood. The neighborhood is peppered with historic influences including the Cedar Hill Cemetery. Queen Anne, Colonial Revival, and Bungalow style housing is found in the Southwest neighborhood.

Upper Albany

The Upper Albany area was established following the boom time of the early 1900's. The area contained a mixture of single-family, two-family, and three-family housing. Albany Avenue intersects the north and south areas in the Upper Albany neighborhood. The railroad extends along Homestead Avenue, an industrial corridor. Queen Anne, Colonial Revival, triple-deckers, and Gothic style homes are found in the area.

West End

Many stately homes are found in the West End of Hartford. These home were built with fine architectural details. Revival styles homes such as the Tutor, Colonial and Georgian are found on many streets in the West End. The West End also has several commercial corridors including Farmington Avenue, Albany Avenue and Capitol Avenue to the south. The streets located north of Farmington Avenue primarily consist of large single family homes, while the homes south of Farmington Avenue primarily consist of two-family and three- family homes.

Historic Character - Goals and Strategies

Goal 1 : Proactively identify Hartford most vital historic properties and designate them individually.

Goal 2 : Identify funding sources to help property owners make historically appropriate alterations.

Goal 3 : Update the Historic Preservation Ordinance to clarify procedures involving demolition of historic properties.

Goal 4 : Review standards to accommodate advances in building materials.
